Dr. Rogers explained to the members present his improved

Galvanic Battery; and also an improved method of analyzing irons and steels for their contained carbon, by the use of bichromate of potassium:

The wood-cut represents a trough, on which stands the battery of cups.

Improved Galvanic Battery, by K. E. Rogers M.D.

A pair of tubes descend from each cup, through the lid of trough, into the liquids. The trough is divided lengthwise by a diaphragm. The tubes of each pair descend one on each side of the diaphragm. The lid of the trough is made air-tight, by the following arrangement: A groove is sunk in the upper edge of

of the four walls of the trough, and a bead to fit the groove runs round the under side of the lid near the edge. The groove being half filled with mercury, the joint is kept air-tight by the weight of the lid and battery. An India-rubber pipe enters the trough, and the breath (or a bellows) is sufficient to cause the liquids to ascend into the cups of the battery during work. After work, the cork is withdrawn from the mouth-piece of the India-rubber tube, and the liquors fall back into the trough. The lid and battery can then be removed and washed.

Mr. Lesley described the faulted structure of the district around Embreeville, in East Tennessee; and exhibited a suite of European iron ores, owned by Mr. Thomas Graham, and another of the ores of North Carolina.

Prof. Cope described the sightless fauna of the Mammoth, Wyandotte, and other Caves.

Pending nominations, Nos. 693, 694, 695, were read,
And the meeting was adjourned.
